

Making room for food: The Agricultural Land Reserve and local culinary culture.

SPACING OUT: MIND EXPANDING TALKS IN GEOGRAPHY

The Lower Mainland of British Columbia has a strong culinary culture that contributes economically and socially to the region. This food system is supported in part by a vibrant agricultural system that is unusual due to legislated land tenure for the industry. This talk will explore the creation of the Agricultural Land Reserve and the role it plays in supporting a diverse culinary culture grounded in fresh, local product.

TALK DETAILS

Dr. Lenore Newman
Thursday, October 4, 2018 | 12:30pm - 1:30pm
T Building Gallery, Langara College

Speaker description

Dr. Lenore Newman is a writer and urban geographer. She holds the Canada Research Chair in Food Security and Environment at the University of the Fraser Valley, where she is Director of the Food and Agriculture Institute and Associate Professor of Geography.

Dr. Newman's book, "Speaking in Cod Tongues: A Canadian Culinary Journey" is available for purchase at Langara's bookstore.

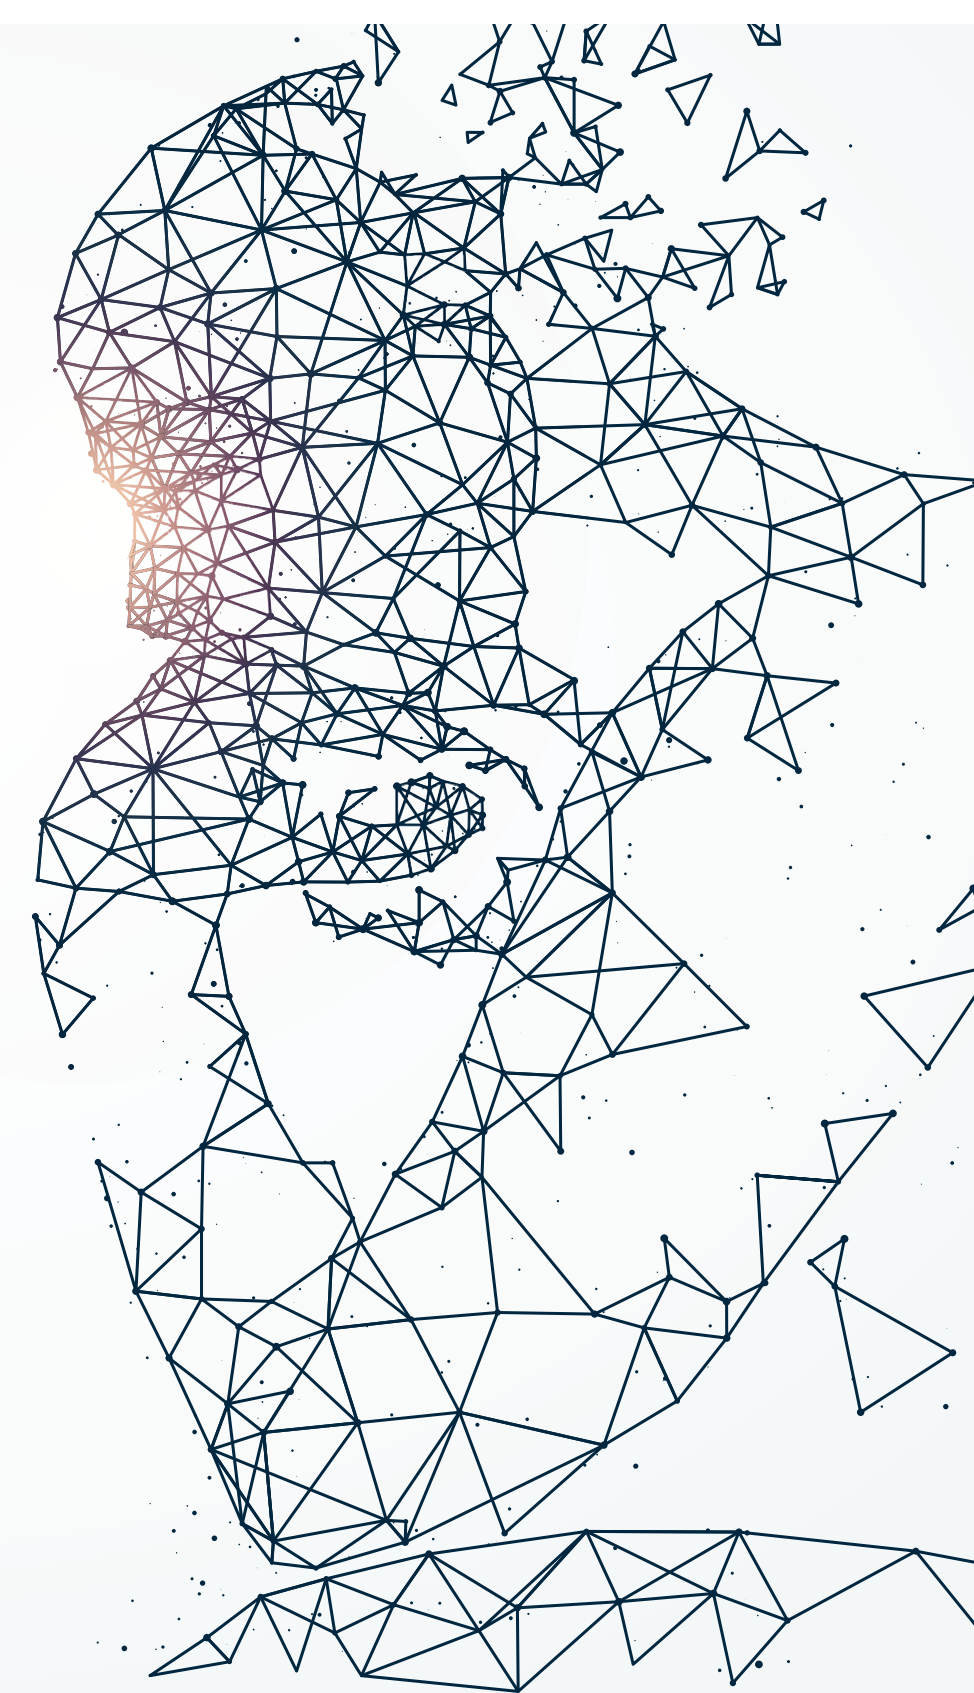

Learn more.

www.langara.ca/geography-speaker-series

ABOUT THE SERIES "SPACING OUT: MIND EXPANDING TALKS IN GEOGRAPHY"

Once a semester, Langara's Geography department brings distinguished academics and practitioners to share their knowledge and experience from the field. Speakers are selected from both sides of the discipline - human and physical geography. Lectures are free and open to students, faculty, staff, and the public.

Langara.

THE COLLEGE OF HIGHER LEARNING.